Find Your Place in a Growing, Multibillion-Dollar Industry

In today's technology-driven environment, paralegals must be equipped with electronic database management skills and be current on the latest e-Discovery software. E-Discovery refers to all electronic materials such as text messages, phone records, and other electronic documents that are used for trial.

E-Discovery has become a multibillion-dollar industry and a key component of the legal process. E-Discovery experts recognize a knowledge gap in the profession, leading to an ever-growing need for highly educated paralegals with the right e-Discovery training. That's why Bryan University is committed to providing you with the necessary paralegal e-Discovery skillset to prepare you for success as soon as you graduate.

Preparing now means you'll be ready for the jobs of the future.

Gain a Competitive Advantage with Specialized Skills

Bryan University is committed to helping you gain a competitive advantage in your career with the most unique e-Discovery paralegal education possible, in addition to the following competencies:

- Paralegal science and legal office management
- Business, criminal, civil, family and contract law
- Civil litigation and investigative research
- Database management and Microsoft Office®
- Preparation for the nationally-recognized Certified Paralegal (CP) exam through the National Association of Legal Assistants (NALA)—one exam attempt is paid for by the university after you earn your associate degree.³

Earn While You Learn: Dual Enrollment Available

You can enroll in the Paralegal Studies Undergraduate Certificate and the Associate Degree in Paralegal Studies concurrently. This means once you complete your certificate, you can get to work sooner while completing your associate degree.
